Jane Eyles

INDEPENDENT

SALFORDS AND SIDLOW RESIDENT

Jane Eyles has lived in Salfords for 17 years. She is a freelance marketing consultant and helps her husband run a small chain of pub restaurants, including Nutfield's Inn on the Pond, from their offices at home in Salfords.

Jane is a founder member of The Cross Oak Conservation Society which, together with other local residents fought against the 2600 houses for Horley and continues to work hard to ensure that the development, as it progresses, has minimal negative impact on the lives of local residents. Jane believes that local representation should reflect the needs of the local people, not the requirements of a government or opposition strategy.

Jane stood in the Surrey County Council elections in 2005 and gained almost 500 votes proving that she was seen as a credible alternative. By voting for Jane, you can establish an effective voice in Reigate and Banstead Borough Council who will fight for the rights of local people without political interference.

Keeping Party Politics out of Local Government

- You have ONE VOTE on May 3rd this year. Use it to secure a representative on Reigate & Banstead Borough Council, who will fight for you, your family, friends and neighbours
- Someone who will listen to and act for local people
- The only candidate that lives, and works, in Salfords and Sidlow

Support from Cross Oak Conservation Society

Jon Bunn, Chairman of Cross oak Conservation Society says; ' As a founder member of Cross Oak Conservation Society I have worked closely with Jane to try and stop the unsustainable developments in the area. Our experience from seeing local democracy at work has strengthened our belief that it is essential for the people of Salfords & Sidlow to have a representative on the Borough Council who will put the needs of the local residents first and foremost'.
